

Nov. 3, 2003

News 01:59 PM CST

Project aims to keep music in schools

Cuts in funding and programs for music education in schools have hit an all time high.

This recent trend is prompting some high profile celebrities to take action.

The Texas Music Project is a result of those efforts.

Its aim is to strengthen and restore music education in Texas schools.

Musicians from the Lone Star State are leading the effort.

Willie Nelson, Lucinda Williams, Boz Scaggs, W.C. Clark and Marcia Ball have donated songs for a special CD called "Don't Mess with Texas Music."

It is in stores now.

Kacy Crowley will perform at a free "Music Matters" concert Monday night at the Starbucks at 24th and Nueces from 7-9 p.m.

All voluntary donations will go to the Texas Music Project.

For more information, log on to www.texasmusicproject.org.

<http://www.kvue.com/entertainment/110303kvueMusic-eh.154b2921.html>